Global Studies
Director: Professor Jack Lule

GS 001 (GCP 001) Introduction to Global Studies (4 credits) (SS/GCP) CRN 45165
The class is open to Arts & Sciences freshmen (class of 2015) and the incoming class (2016). MTVInternational. Islam. Yao. The UN. Global warming. Terrorism. McDonald’s. Almost every aspect of human existence has been touched in some way by the dynamic of globalization. The historical and continuing integration of peoples, cultures, markets and nations, globalization may become the defining characteristic of the 21st Century. It has been a Januslike force of two faces, with advantages and disadvantages, surfeit and suffering. In this emphatically interdisciplinary course, the foundation class for the Global Studies major and intended for freshmen and sophomores, students will be introduced to a variety of historical, critical and analytical perspectives, methods and vocabularies for continued study of globalization & social change. Professor: Jack Lule

GS 106 (ANTH 106) Cultural Studies & Globalization (4 credits) (SS) CRN 47350
This course closely examines the complex relationship between culture and globalization. The impact of globalization on local culture is an essential topic. But the interaction of globalization and culture is not a oneway process. People around the world adapt globalization to their own uses, merging global cultural flows with local practices in transformative ways. The course will study the interaction of local culture with globalizing forces; immigration and culture; the localizing of mass culture; cultures of diasporic and migratory groups, and globalization, gender and identity. Professor: Bruce Whitehouse
Tuesday/Thursday 1:10p.m.-2:25p.m. – CU 317

GS 248 (COMM 248) Global Communications (4 credits) (SS) CRN 47742
This class studies, from an historical and cultural perspective, how globalization shapes and is shaped by communication and media structures and processes, with special emphasis on transnational media corporations and their interaction with cultures around the globe. Topics include: globalization, media and culture; mass media and development; the flow of entertainment programs and debates on cultural imperialism; media and migration; the imbalanced flow of information in the world; the debate on the New World Information Order; and forms of resistance to transnational media from world governance institutions, such as UNESCO, state regulatory responses, and alternative media, such as citizen blogs and pirate radio. Professor: John Jirik
Tuesday/Thursday 9:20a.m.-10:35 a.m. – CU 230

GS 296 (REL 296) Modern Islamic Thought: Between Modernity and Tradition (4 credits) (HU) CRN 47357
This course will focus on developments in Islamic thinking that emerge from the modern encounter between Muslim societies and the West. While there is a long history of interaction between the West and the East, the modern period is marked by widespread social upheaval in the Islamic world in the face of Western political and economic expansion. Many Muslim thinkers, in a wide variety of contexts, engaged with the political and ideological challenge represented by the West by attempting to reform traditional Islam. The reforms they advocated touched not only on purely theological matters but also sought to redefine what it meant to be a Muslim and to reconfigure Muslim societies. In short to modernize Islam. In this course we will look at the writings of many such thinkers, including but not limited to Sayyid Ahmad Khan in India, Muhammad Abduh in Egypt, and Jamal al-Din al-Afghani, among many others. Professor: Khurram Hussain

GS 324 (AAS 324/ANTH 324) Globalization and Development in Africa (4 credits) (SS) CRN 48205
Course examines the challenges Africa presents to expectations of modernization and development. It poses these questions: Have African societies been left behind by globalization, shut out from it, or do they reflect an unexpected side of globalization processes? What is Africa’s place in the neo-liberal world order? What role does “African culture” play in generating or blocking social change? How can anthropology illuminate prospects for change on what has long been regarded as the “dark continent?” Professor: Bruce Whitehouse
Monday/Wednesday 11:10 a.m.-12:25 p.m. – CU 317

GS 398 (ENG 398) The Heirs of Scheherazade: 20th Century Approaches to Arab-American Literature (4 credits) (HU) CRN 47822
This course will explore contemporary images of Scheherazade through literature. We will read the best Arab American women’s writing, including authors such as Nelida Pinon, Voices of the Desert, Alia Yunis, The Night Counter, Ghada Samman, Beirut Nightmares, Diana Abu-Jaber, Crescent, Assia Djebar’s Women of Algiers in Their Apartments, and Leila Sebbar, Sherazade. These authors reframe and reimagine this complex figure, freely appropriating material from the present and the past, mixing history, fables, and the art of storytelling with the original material of The Arabian Nights, transferring power from the caliph to the women. While these diasporic tales from the present gesture to a long tradition dating back to the 9th Century, they subvert the stereotyping of Arab women as passive and without agency, creating empowered narrators in charge of their own destinies.
